

GO FURTHER WITH 60,000 WELCOME BONUS POINTS WHEN YOU SPEND £6,000 IN YOUR FIRST SIX MONTHS. Find out more

AMEX DON'T live life WITHOUT IT New Cardmember Offer ends 7 June 2022 Terms and conditions apply. ST. Subject to approval.

SPAIN Villa Soro, San Sebastian, hotel review: a 'sleeping beauty' in Spain's foodie heartland

A smart new hotel makes the gastronomic Basque town a tempting weekend break

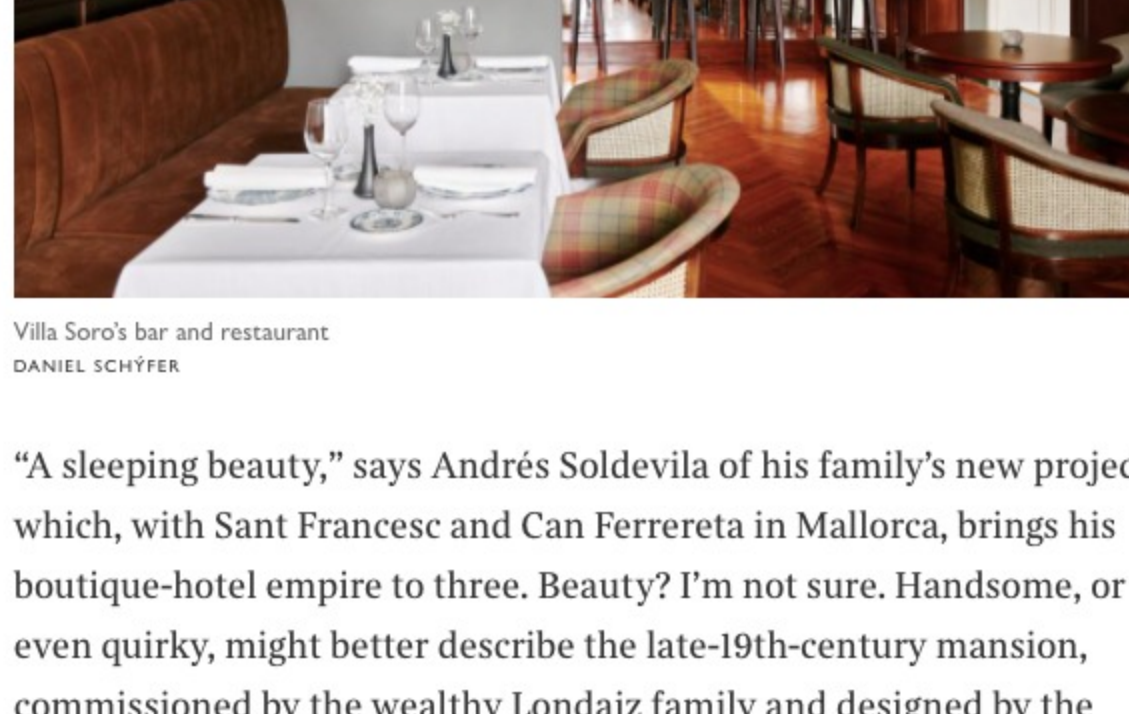

La Concha in San Sebastian
GETTY IMAGES

Pamela Goodman | Saturday April 23 2022, 12:01am, The Times

Share | Save

It is a shame that the famous Playa de la Concha one could be forgiven for thinking summer was in full swing. The paddleboarders were out, not a wetsuit between them, joggers too in barely-there Lycra, and numerous swimmers, chief among them a group of stout, elderly ladies in petalled swimming hats who took to the sea like it was a warm bath. Yet snow still dusted the Pyrenean foothills, which rise up behind the city, and there was no doubting a lingering April chill despite the cloudless sky.

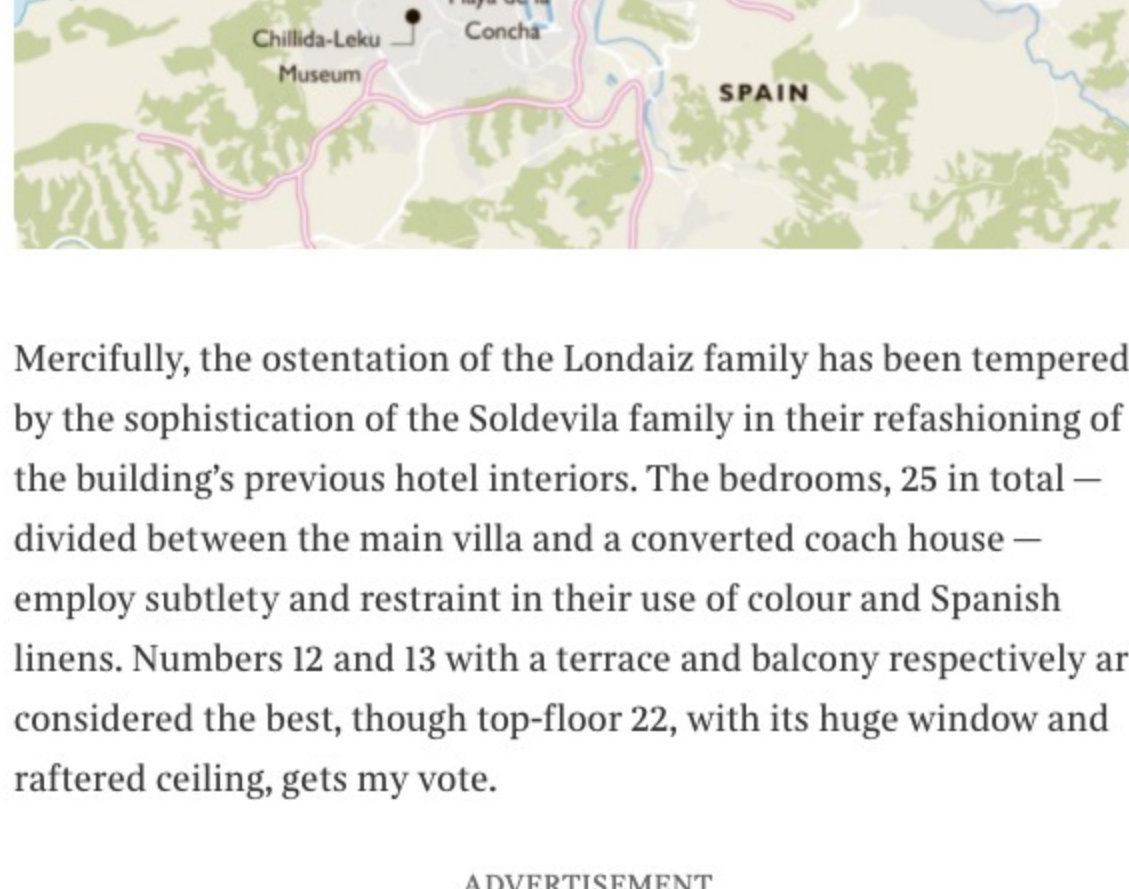

Some 30 minutes' walk from La Concha, across San Sebastian's landmark Zurriola bridge with its green and white columns like art deco bowling pins, past Playa de la Zurriola, the Avenida Ategorrieta feels distinctly suburban. The wide, residential artery is bordered by fancy houses and villas, and at No 61 stands the hotel Villa Soro.

Villa Soro's bar and restaurant
DANIEL SCHIFFER

"A sleeping beauty," says Andrés Soldevila of his family's new project which, with Sant Francesc and Can Ferrereta in Mallorca, brings his boutique-hotel empire to three. Beauty? I'm not sure. Handsome, or even quirky, might better describe the late-19th-century mansion, commissioned by the wealthy Londaiz family and designed by the then architect of the moment Luis Elizalde, who clearly had a penchant for the high Victorian style. Down the road at the Palacio Miramar overlooking La Concha, the Spanish royals were at it too, building their summer retreat in much the same vein as Villa Soro with sharply pitched gables, grandly arched entrances and mock-Tudor timbering. And when fashionable Queen Maria Cristina commissioned Pierre Ducasse to lay out the gardens at Miramar, the Londaiz family did the same at Villa Soro.

A grandiose expression of status is what Villa Soro was all about; on the inside too, where a mighty oak staircase rises from the entrance hall, a stained-glass ceiling shows the Londaiz coat of arms and an unusual stairway chapel with more stained glass — this time depicting the Holy Family — casts a kind of beatific beneficence on arriving visitors.

Mercifully, the ostentation of the Londaiz family has been tempered by the sophistication of the Soldevila family in their refashioning of the building's previous hotel interiors. The bedrooms, 25 in total — divided between the main villa and a converted coach house — employ subtlety and restraint in their use of colour and Spanish linens. Numbers 12 and 13 with a terrace and balcony respectively are considered the best, though top-floor 22, with its huge window and raftered ceiling, gets my vote.

ADVERTISEMENT

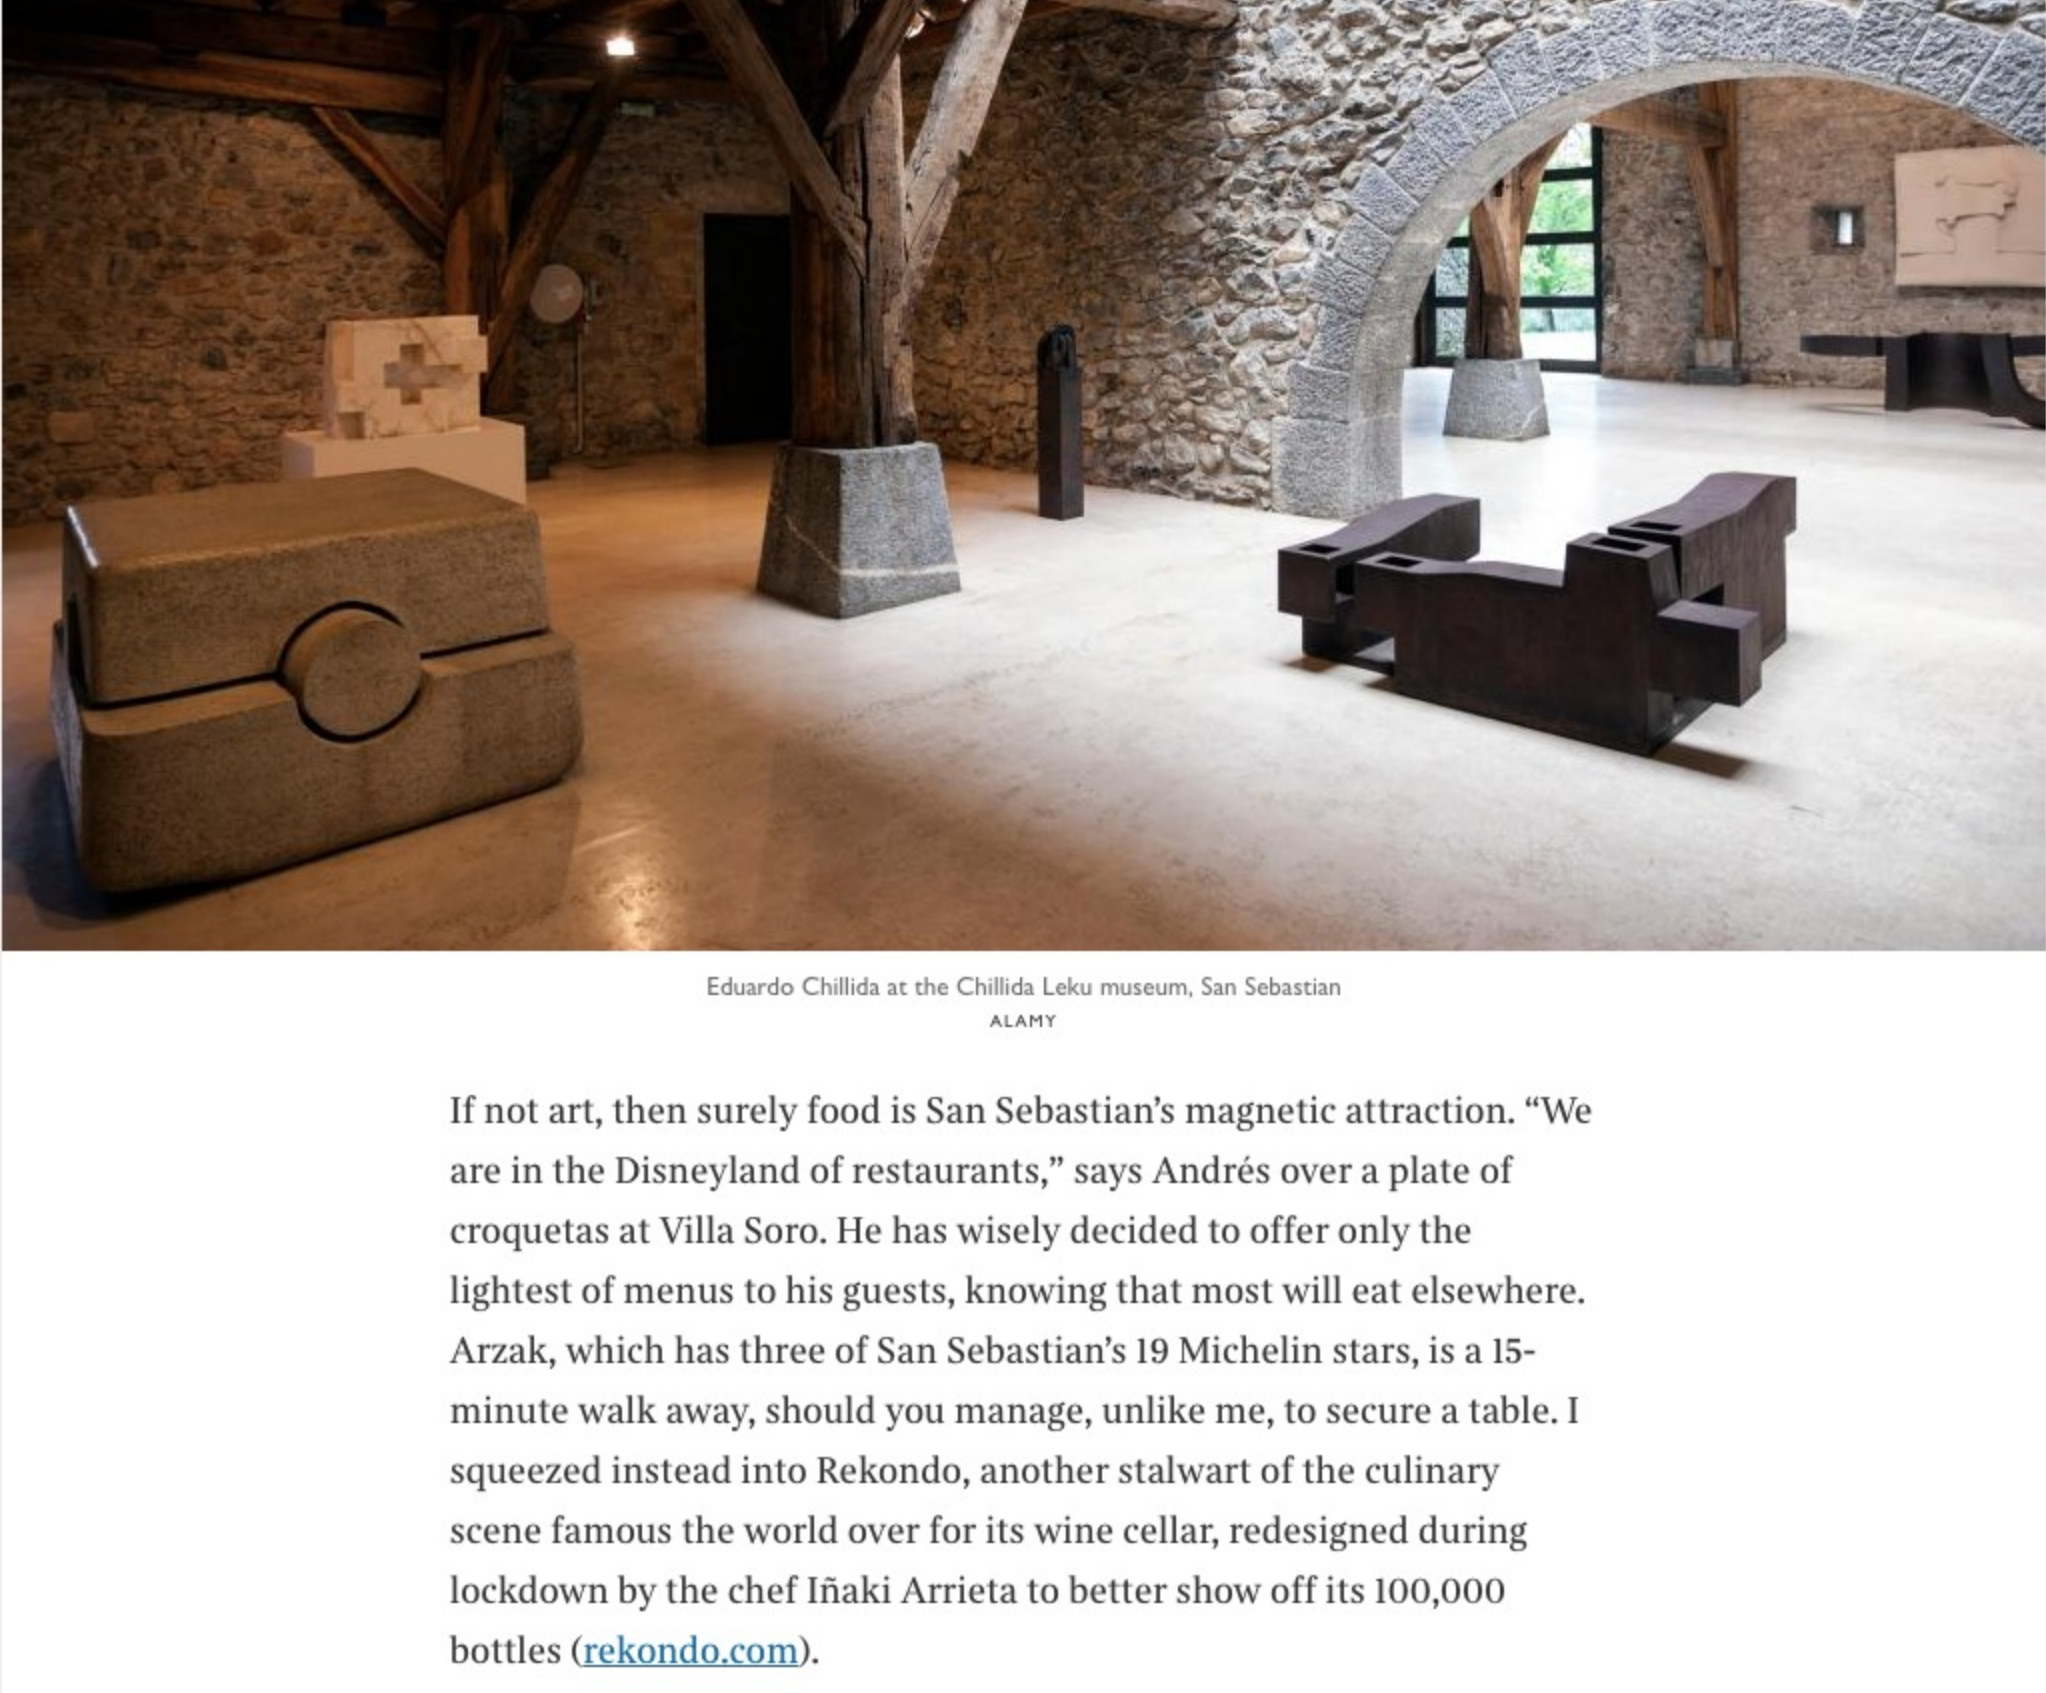

Downstairs the monochrome living room is the star of the show, where I sit tremulously guarding a glass of rioja for fear of upsetting the colour scheme. On the wall, firmly rooting this hotel in northern Spain, are a lithograph and a woodcut by Eduardo Chillida, the celebrated Basque artist whose iron sculpture, El Peine del Viento, anchored to the rocks at the entrance to La Concha's bay, is an icon of local culture.

The dining room at Villa Soro
DANIEL SCHIFFER

While Chillida remains one of the biggest pulls — the open-air museum dedicated to his work, Chillida Leku (museochillidaleku.com), run by the celebrated gallerists Hauser & Wirtz, is a 15-minute drive away — it is his fellow Basque installation artist Cristina Iglesias who is the talk of the town for her complex new geological sculpture, Hondalea (Marine Abyss), housed in a restored lighthouse on the island of Santa Clara in the middle of La Concha bay.

- Best hotels in San Sebastian
- Can I travel to Spain? The entry requirements explained

Eduardo Chillida at the Chillida Leku museum, San Sebastian
ALAMY

If not art, then surely food is San Sebastian's magnetic attraction. "We are in the Disneyland of restaurants," says Andrés over a plate of croquetas at Villa Soro. He has wisely decided to offer only the lightest of menus to his guests, knowing that most will eat elsewhere. Arzak, which has three of San Sebastian's 19 Michelin stars, is a 15-minute walk away, should you manage, to secure a table. I squeezed instead into Rekondo, another stalwart of the culinary scene famous the world over for its wine cellar, redesigned during lockdown by the chef Iñaki Arrieta to better show off its 100,000 bottles (rekondo.com).

TIMES TRAVEL
Best villas in Spain
Do you want a countryside retreat or a sleek contemporary pad with sea views?
Read the article >

SPONSORED

Grand Designs Live is back, and it's going to be greener than ever

We reveal why 57 percent of business leaders say their firms were more productive

But the old town of San Sebastian remains its beating gourmet heart. Hitting the pintxo trail is a local ritual — the kind of Basque equivalent to a pub crawl but with better food and no beer. Pintxos, frequently a slice of baguette with any variety of topping secured with a cocktail stick, have now evolved to include other, more sophisticated tapas-style snacks, washed down with wine, txakoli (a bubbly local wine) or cider. Many of the bars have a speciality: La Cuchara de San Telmo is famous for its sucking pig and foie gras; Goiz Argi for prawn skewers; Casa Urola for artichokes; Borda Berri for ribs and pig's ears; Ganbara for croquetas; and La Viña for melt-in-the-mouth cheesecake. I did them all, one after the other, until I felt like a stout, elderly lady, ready for a swim.

Pamela Goodman was a guest of Villa Soro, which has B&B doubles from £125 (hotelvillasoro.com). Fly to Bilbao

Sign up for our Times Travel newsletter and follow us on Instagram and Twitter

Related articles

SUMMER 2022
25 escapes that will restore your faith in ferries
These are choppy times for the ferry industry. The storm over the sacking of 800 staff by P&O Ferries rages on, with the company's crossings to...
April 03 2022, 12:01am
Chris Haslam

TRIPS FOR 2022
Around the world in 15 foodie breaks
It's no secret that food can make or break a trip. We all have those hazy memories of the perfect pad thai, or a warm pain au chocolat you still...
March 26 2022, 12:01am
Nicola Brady

SPAIN
Madrid's had a makeover
It is the de facto capital of the Latin world and the second largest city in the EU after Berlin. In the Prado, Thyssen-Bornemisza and Reina...
February 05 2022, 12:01am
Paul Richardson

Most popular

How Bulb's blowout left taxpayers with a £2bn energy bill

Jeremy Clarkson on Netflix: It costs a packet to watch the telly these days — but it's still cheaper than going to the pub

Inside Harry and Meghan's life in Montecito, the ritziest suburb of California

Comments (17)

Comments are subject to our community guidelines, which can be viewed here.

Add to the conversation...

Sort by Recommended

M Mervyn Sands | 1 DAY AGO

€300+ a night when I looked ... U r avin a larf. Doing a 10000 mile European trip end May - end July. Budget approx £100 a night, so won't be staying there. ~_o ( doh.

Reply Recommend \(3\)

P Prad | 1 DAY AGO

Just been to San Sebastian. Wonderful place. We drove from Calais taking two days breaks in Amboise, Loir valley and Bordeaux (visited St. Emillion wineries). Great trip.

Reply Recommend \(2\)

H humphrey p-b | 1 DAY AGO

take the Brittany ferry there, great, reaxing trip

Reply Recommend \(1\)

R Richard Carter | 1 DAY AGO

We did the trip by train (Eurostar, TGV, to Giverny to the Pyrenees border, little train through the mountains. Very scenic.

Reply Recommend \(1\)

N No News | 2 DAYS AGO

Great looking place - best airport to fly to from UK anyone?

Reply Recommend